

Jewish school teachers trained in social-emotional learning

SunSentinel

Sergio Carmona, South Florida Sun Sentinel

South Florida Sun Sentinel · September 10, 2020

Teachers from a Jewish school in North Miami Beach participated in a virtual training program focused on social-emotional learning during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Hidden Sparks, an organization that trains educators in Jewish day schools, conducted the program for the participating teachers who work at Yeshiva Toras Chaim Toras Emes-Klurman Elementary School.

As part of the training, Hidden Sparks SEL coach Lily Howard Scott worked with the teachers, who learned strategies to help them support their students' emotional responses to the pandemic. They were also trained on how to establish new classroom routines and practices that are intended to boost students sense of connection, engagement and investment at school.

Rabbi Yitzchok Schiff, a teacher at Klurman Elementary School, thought the program was interesting for him.

Our goal is to create a safe and engaging place for users to connect over interests and passions. In order to improve our community experience, we are temporarily suspending article commenting.